Weekly Message

In the weekly Friday email, Rabbi Grater mentioned the book "Homelessness is a Housing Problem" but mistakenly said the author was Matthew Desmond. The authors are Gregg Colburn and Clayton Page Aldern. You can find the book at this website. homelessnesshousingproblem.com.

Matthew Desmond is also an excellent author and his books, "Evicted" and "Poverty, By America" are highly recommended and featured on the recent Friends In Deed Podcast.

Dear Friend,

Stephanie is living in affordable housing in Pasadena with her adult daughter, who is attending a local city college. She had been working full time and has always paid her rent on time. About a year ago she was injured at work and placed on light duty. Her employer started cutting down her hours as her job mainly consists of heavy lifting and physical labor. So Stephanie started to fall behind on her rent and was in danger of eviction.

She reached out to our Eviction Prevention and Rental Assistance (EPRA) staff, and our program has been able to pay her current rent while she works on paying down her arrears. She’s also working with her doctors to recover from her injury. Friends In Deed’s rental assistance is also allowing her daughter to look for a part-time job without the added stress of worrying if they will end up homeless. EPRA Assistant Director Marlene Martinez has been providing case management and financial planning services to the family to help them get back on track with their rent.
We work hard to provide as much rental assistance to as many people as possible, but the need is certainly more than we have to offer. If you want to support this program, your donation will allow us to help more people like Stephanie and her daughter to stay housed and keep their lives on track. To understand more about how enabling people to stay housed is critical to solving the scourge of homelessness in our country, I urge you to read Gregg Colburn and Clayton Page Aldern’s book, “Homelessness is a Housing Problem.”

Finally, if you haven’t already registered for the Pasadena Mayor’s Interfaith Prayer Breakfast, you still have two days! Join over 400 of your fellow Pasadenaans for a morning of community, connection, and prayer, and be inspired by the music and stories of the Urban Voices Project. Register here and be with us next Thursday, May 4th.

Blessings and have a lovely weekend,
Rabbi Joshua
